Damaged Plane Lands Safe West To Seek Truce

Landing Gear Broken On Takeoff

NEW YORK (AP) - A huge transatlatic jet airliner roared into the air bound for Europe Sunday. Less than 12 hours before, its pilot had landed a crippled sister ship after four nerve-wracking hours circling the field.

All but eight of the 102 passengers on that plane were aboard the second flight. They had taken off from the same runway Saturday night, but landing gear damage during takeoff forced the pilot, Capt. Edward Sommers, to make an emergency landing.

"I'm ready, willing, able and eager," said Sommers when asked if he was prepared for a second takeoff after the ordeal.

Of that experience, he said he was apprehensive about the immense crowds of sight-seers on the field and about the chance the plane might slew around and catch fire from the sparks. But he added: "I wasn't really

Pleasant Valley Tax Case Enters County Court Today

Ross, Polk Request Raise In Taxes

THE SUCCESS of Pleasant Valley Jointure's estimated million and a half dollar school building program may depend on the outcome of Ross and Polk townships' petition in court this morning for an increase in school taxes.

Russell L. Mervine, jointure solicitor, warned the board Wednesday night that Ira Haupt and Co., New York City, the jointure's bonding company, may not wish to undertake the issuing of $1,500,000 worth of bonds if two of the jointure's three townships will end the 1959-1960 school year with de-

He wants more teaching of Asian and African languages in our schools. He does not stand alone. Far from it.

President Eisenhower, says Americans are "the world's poorest linguists. He speaks from the vantage point of being president of Johns Hopkins University and a former president of Pennsylvania State University.

More than that, he has the experience of serving the State Department as a trouble-shooter in South America. He should know the handicap that comes of being a single-tongued people.

So should Adlai Stevenson, twice Democratic nominee for president and a world tourist. He says Americans are neglecting the study of foreign languages because they've become "fat, dumb and complacent."

Rough as these words are, they are intended to underscore the fact that most of us are content to acquire material possessions and creature comforts rather than overcome language limitations which shut us off from millions of persons whose tongues we cannot understand.

Other men as well informed as these three also insist that Americans must master foreign languages as well as the techniques of science, if this nation is to survive the international competitions of the future.

Why Presidents Need Tough Hides

When the presidency becomes so overburdening that there must be a moment's break in the heavily serious routine, Dwight D. Eisenhower frequently leaves for the golf course. Other Presidents before him let off steam by going on a yacht trip, or playing poker, or taking the hide off a critic in a scathing letter.

Other times President Eisenhower, like Winston Churchill and other men who know at first-hand the terrible burdens and pressures of great office. takes paint brush and palette in hand and relaxes with his painting.

Ike has been harpooned so many times in wisecrack or sarcastic oratory for his golf-playing that this long has been old stuff.

Now he has been given his lumps as an amateur painter.

It all came about in the furor over the paintings picked for exhibit at Moscow. Congressman Walter's House Un-American Activities Committee has been holding hearings on the selection. The Pennsylvania Congressman says that some of the paintings not only aren't representative of America, they're downright subversive.

How about this? the President was

Mike Euton Barker, student at the University of Texas. comes to the defense of the C student and some of what he says does make sense. First, he becomes slightly vituperative, which merely marks his age. He writes:

. . . Enrapt in his intelluctual garment, George seems to think that C students play around and are thus not worthy of a statepaid education.

It is possible to spend four years at a college, get by with a C, take mostly snap courses, and graduate. That is wasteful, particularly at a time of high taxes, inflation and decation is so costly.

Then Barker says: 'Aside from the fact that his thinking parallels the Communist idea of the 'survival of the fittest,' is the fact that some of the C students suffer from grade discrimination because of his refusal to accept as gospel the utterings of leftwing professors who teach from books authored by pseudo-liberals and socialists."

First of all, the concept of "survival of the fittest" is unrelated to Communism or Marxism. It is a biologic theory developed by Charles Darwin and refers entirely to physical fitness to environmental conditions. While Darwinism had some influence upon the later thinking of Karl Marx, the general trend of Russian Communist scientists such as Pavlov and Lysenko has been that as man can control his environment, he is abl eto establish the fittest stock to survive. Besides Marx's "Communist Manifesto" was done 11 years before the "Origin of Species." As a matter of fact, much current biological thinking and practise are based on the Mendelian theory.

Marxian biology ignores such facts as are obvious throughout history, namely, that sick and even crippled men are sometimes among the greatest intellects. Beethoven was stone deaf when he wrote the Ninth; Milton was blind when he wrote "Paradise Lost."

The list is without limit, But that is no warrant for the lazy student to assume that he receives a C only because he disagrees with his professors. Sometimes he deserves the C.

George had the right jokes, on the bright side of life. the correct advice and the outstanding ability to pass on his own good judgment to those in attendance.

Maybe you have known people with the same qualities as George, but I doubt very much if they were present under the same conditions.

Many years ago George suffered a leg and arm injury. In later years both proved to be serious. The leg injury made George timp permanently and the arm became almost useless at about the same Did he complain? Not George.

He went about his everyday tasks with the same enthusiasm as ever and never displayed the slightest bit of bitterness. He was still able to work and he was still able to handle his beloved fishing pole. That made everything all right by George.

I ran into George a few weeks ago at Pocono Manor's golf course. I remarked that he had lost weight. George Analyst Q. I own just a few shares of common stock. I am not buying through the Monthly Investment Plan. Is it possible for me to set up a simple program to automatically reinvest my dividends?

A. It would be impractical, maybe even impossible. The first thing you would have to do would be to leave your stocks with a brokerin "a street name." There's nothing wrong with that, It's often a good idea But, for automatic reinvestment of dividends, you would have to set up a pretty complicated kind of discretionary account. It's doubtful that any broker would want to handle such an account if there are only a few shares of

What does this mean? It also states that "corporations following a policy of declaring successive stock dividends must transfer from retained earnings to the capital stock account an amount equal to the approximate current market price of the stock" Isn't this something like transferring money from a left hand pocket to a right hand pocket?

A. Both quotations concern the fairly complicated field of corporate accounting. To begin to understand the first one, you must realize that dividends are paid out of earnings. When a stock dividend is paid, some of the earnings money must be capitalized. How is that done? By doing what the second quotation
